Pearls of Wisdom: Our Braided Lives

This session is a mentoring initiative centered around STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering and Math) and designed to nurture a deeper relationship between professional women and high school girls through the use of quotes from well-known women from all generations and by embracing diversity. This initiative encourages women and girls to bond and find a commonality through these quotes. The “braided lives” objective pairs women and girls as mentor/mentee and engages them in conversation using the quote of a well-known woman as a discussion point. This community outreach initiative, sponsored by KPMG, will include high school students giving attendees an opportunity to give back by participating as a mentor in this session.

LEADERSHIP & EXECUTIVE DEVELOPMENT BREAKOUT SESSIONS

11:00 am – 12:00 pm Maryland 1	Mentors, Advocates and Sponsors, What You Don't Know May Really Hurt You!! Behind many successful women, you will sometimes find a powerful backer, often male, who so believes in his protégé that he has put his own reputation on the line to promote her. Often, you will also find that these women also have a deep and broad network of backers, cultivated from within and outside of their industry over the course of decades. In this session, you will explore the business case for building such networks, define the roles of mentors/advocates/sponsors, identify why men garner more sponsorship than women, and recognize barriers that women face in securing mentoring, advocacy, and sponsorship. FACILITATOR: Jeff Halter, President, YWOMEN
11:00 am – 12:00 pm Maryland 2	From Adversaries to Allies: 3 Secrets to Powerful Gender Communication in the Workplace Gender communication differences sometimes derail career advancement and self-development. In this session, you will learn to communicate without judging value, to strive for clarity in all communication, and to identify your own hidden communication strengths. Attendees will also explore the five habits that hinder communication and discuss strategies designed to improve one's personal brand as an effective leader. FACILITATOR: Lenora Billings-Harris, Author, Consultant and Founder, Lenora Speaks
11:00 am – 12:00 pm Maryland 3	Sitting in the Truth: Power, Perception and Presence What are your hopes and dreams? What do you really want out of life, out of your career? Are you willing to go the distance to make it happen? This session will focus on the intentionality and congruency necessary to drive one's career, one's life, and the critical skills required. The attendees will engage in dialogue about the universal challenges they face and a philosophical approach to address them. In the end, they will not only answer the question "What do you really want" but, if they choose, will leave with a pathway to get there. FACILITATOR: Audra Bohannon, Principal, Global Novations, a Korn/Ferry International Company
11:00 am – 12:00 pm Maryland 4	Men At Work: What Are They Thinking, Saying and Doing We know but often find it very challenging to recognize how gender differences affect our working collaboratively in the workplace, and especially how to adapt our behaviors to enable successful team work, build ongoing relationships, and achieve common goals. How we communicate, express feelings, give feedback, solve problems, think, and what men and women say about each other, will all be explored in this session. MODERATORS: Kim Weaver, Former Chief Diversity Officer, McCormick PANELISTS: • Larry Stubblefield , Deputy Assistant Secretary, Diversity and Leadership, Department of the Army • Marques Benton , Vice President, Director of the Office of Diversity and Inclusion, Federal Reserve Bank of Boston
